Worksheet: Chapter 2 - The Power of Personal Expression

Purpose: This worksheet is designed to help students engage with the concepts from Chapter 2, reflect on their personal experiences, practice creative writing skills, and apply the ideas of self-expression, emotional identification, mental wellness, and sharing their voice. It includes a mix of reflective questions, creative prompts, and decision-making activities.

Part 1: Reflecting on Self-Expression

Objective: Understand why self-expression matters for teens and connect it to your own life.

- Quick Write (3-5 minutes): In a few sentences, describe one way you already express yourself (e.g., through fashion, music, social media, or hobbies). How does it make you feel to share that part of yourself with others or keep it private?
- Personal Connection: Think about a time when you felt like no one understood you. How could writing about that moment help you process it? Write 2-3 sentences.

Part 2: Identifying Emotions and Thoughts Through Writing

Objective: Practice techniques to uncover and name your emotions using creative writing. 3. Emotion Colour

Match: Pick a colour that matches your mood today (e.g., red for angry, blue for sad, yellow for happy). Write 3-5 sentences explaining why you feel like this colour, as if you're talking to a friend.

- Stream of Consciousness Challenge (3 minutes): Set a timer and write everything that's on your mind right now without stopping or worrying about grammar. After, read it back and underline one emotion or thought that stands out. Write 1-2 sentences about why you think it's important.

Part 3: Writing for Mental Wellness

Objective: Use writing as a tool to boost mental wellness and manage stress. 5. Gratitude Moment: Write about one thing you're thankful for today, even if it's small (e.g., a kind word, a funny video, a good snack). Describe in 3-5 sentences why it made your day better.

- Worry Release: List 2-3 things that are stressing you out right now. Then, write a short note to yourself (2-3 sentences) about why it's okay to let go of these worries for a moment. (Optional: Crumple this part of the paper or cross it out to symbolize releasing the stress.) Worries:

Part 4: Balancing Vulnerability and Privacy

Objective: Reflect on how much of your voice you want to share and with whom. 7. Creative Prompt: Write a short piece (3-5 sentences) about a fictional character who feels an emotion you've experienced recently (e.g., excitement, frustration, loneliness).

- Sharing Decision: Look at the piece you just wrote. Would you share it with:
 - A close friend?
 - A group (like a class or club)?
 - Online (like social media)?
 - Keep it private? Write 2-3 sentences explaining your choice.
- Comfort Chart: Fill out the table below for two pieces of writing (real or imaginary) you've done or might do. Rate your comfort level for sharing (1 = "No way," 5 = "Totally fine") and decide who you'd share it with, if anyone.

Part 5: Wrap-Up and Personal Goal

Objective: Set a personal intention for your writing journey based on this chapter. 10. Final Reflection: What's one key idea from this chapter (e.g., identifying emotions, writing for wellness, sharing your voice) that you want to focus on in your writing over the next week? Write 2-3 sentences about why it matters to you and how you'll try it out. _____

Bonus Challenge (Optional): Over the next few days, write for 5 minutes about a feeling or thought you've been having. It can be a journal entry, poem, or story. Then, decide if you'll share it or keep it private, and note why on the back of this worksheet.
