Chapter 5: Responding to Major Medical Emergencies - Worksheet

Hey, high school heroes! This worksheet for Chapter 5 is designed to help you solidify your lifesaving skills for major medical emergencies. You'll review key concepts from choking, CPR, seizures, fainting, and anaphylaxis through a mix of matching, scenarios, true/false questions, and a reflection activity. Grab a pen, think through each section, and test your readiness to be a teen responder. Let's save lives—starting with this practice!

Part 1: Matching - Emergency Actions Match each emergency situation with the correct first response by writing the letter of the response next to the situation in the table below.

Emergency Situation	Response Letter	Correct First Response
1. Choking (teen or adult, can't speak or cough)		A. Ask if they're choking, then perform the Heimlich maneuver with upward thrusts.
2. Unresponsive and not breathing normally		B. Call 911 or have someone call, then start hands-only CPR with chest compressions.
3. Fainting at a hot event, briefly unresponsive		C. Lay them flat, elevate their legs, and check if they wake up within a minute.
4. Seizure with shaking on the ground		D. Clear area of hazards, protect their head with something soft, and time the event.
5. Anaphylaxis with swelling and wheezing, has EpiPen		E. Use the EpiPen on their thigh, call 911 immediately, and stay with them.

Emergency Situation

Response Letter

Correct First Response

- 1. Choking (teen or adult, can't speak or cough)
- A. Ask if they're choking, then perform the Heimlich maneuver with upward thrusts.

- 2. Unresponsive and not breathing normally
- B. Call 911 or have someone call, then start hands-only CPR with chest compressions.
- 3. Fainting at a hot event, briefly unresponsive
- C. Lay them flat, elevate their legs, and check if they wake up within a minute.
- 4. Seizure with shaking on the ground
- D. Clear area of hazards, protect their head with something soft, and time the event.
- 5. Anaphylaxis with swelling and wheezing, has EpiPen
- E. Use the EpiPen on their thigh, call 911 immediately, and stay with them.

Part 2: Scenario-Based Questions Read each scenario and write a brief response (2-3 sentences) on what you would do as the first responder.

- Scenario 1: Choking at a Party You're at a friend's birthday party, and someone starts choking on a piece of cake. They're clutching their throat, turning red, and can't make a sound. What do you do?
- Scenario 2: Collapse During a Game During a basketball game at school, a player collapses on the court and doesn't respond when you shout at them. Their chest isn't moving. What are your immediate steps?
- Scenario 3: Allergic Reaction at Lunch Your friend eats a sandwich in the cafeteria, then starts wheezing and says their face feels itchy. You see hives on their arms, and they look scared. They mention they're allergic to peanuts and have an EpiPen in their backpack. What do you do?

Part 3: True or False - Quick Check Circle T for True or F for False for each statement.

- During a seizure, you should put something in the person's mouth to stop them from biting their tongue. (T / F)
- Hands-only CPR focuses on chest compressions and doesn't require mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. (T / F)
- If someone faints, you should make them sit up immediately to help them breathe better. (T / F)
- An EpiPen can fully cure anaphylaxis, so there's no need to call 911 after using it. (T / F)
- If you're alone and choking, you can perform a self-Heimlich by leaning over a chair and thrusting into your stomach. (T / F)

Part 4: Personal Reflection and Action Plan Think about how you can apply these skills in real life. Answer the following in a few sentences.

- Which emergency situation from this chapter do you feel most confident handling, and why?
- Which situation do you feel least prepared for, and what's one step you can take (like practicing with a friend or watching a tutorial) to build your confidence?
- Write down one person (like a friend or family member) you'll share a key tip from this chapter with, and what tip you'll share (e.g., how to spot choking signs). Person: _____ Tip: _____

Bonus Activity: Group Practice (Optional) Team up with a friend or family member to role-play one of the scenarios from Part 2. Practice the steps (like pretending to do the Heimlich or chest compressions on a pillow). Jot down one thing you learned or found tricky during the role-play. Notes:
