Worksheet for Chapter 6: Crisis Communication Skills

Instructions: Complete the following activities and questions. Use the knowledge from Chapter 6 to guide your answers. Be prepared to discuss your responses in class or with a group. Let's turn you into a crisis communication champion!

Part 1: Scenario-Based Critical Thinking

Read the following scenario and answer the questions to apply what you've learned. Write your answers in full sentences.

Scenario: You're at a school picnic in the U.S. with your classmates when a friend, Sam, falls from a low tree branch and hurts his leg badly. He's in pain and panicking. Other students are around, looking worried and unsure of what to do. There's no teacher nearby at the moment, but you have a phone with signal.

- Calling for Help: What emergency number will you dial, and what are the key pieces of information you will provide to the operator? (Hint: Think about the order of information.)
- Communicating with the Victim: How will you reassure Sam while waiting for help? What will you say, and how will you approach asking for consent to check his injury?
- Working as a Team: How will you coordinate with the other students around you? List at least two specific tasks you would delegate to others and explain why you chose those tasks for them.

Part 2: Role-Play Activity – Practice Makes Perfect

Pair up with a classmate or friend to complete this hands-on activity. Take turns playing different roles and use the space below to reflect on the experience. (If doing this alone, write out a script for both roles.)

Activity: Simulate an emergency call and victim interaction.

- Person A: You're the caller. Pretend you've witnessed an accident (e.g., a bike fall) and need to call emergency services (use 911 for U.S. or 112 for India based on your preference). Speak clearly and provide all necessary details.
- Person B: You're the victim. Act distressed (but not over-the-top!) and respond to Person A's attempts to calm you. Decide if you'll give consent for help or not.

After completing the role-play, answer the following:

- How did it feel to make the emergency call or to be the victim? Was it harder than you expected to stay calm?
- What was one thing you did well during the role-play, and one thing you could improve?

Part 3: Personal Action Plan – Be Prepared!

Think about how you can prepare yourself to use these crisis communication skills in real life. Answer the following questions to create a personal action plan.

- What is the emergency number for where you live? Do you know how to find emergency numbers if you travel to a new place? If not, write down one way you can research this.
- Name one person (friend, family, or classmate) you can practice these skills with. What specific activity from this chapter (e.g., role-playing a call, practicing delegation) will you do with them?
- Write down one key takeaway from this chapter that you'll remember in a crisis. Why does it stand out to you?

Bonus Challenge: Team Crisis Drill

If possible, organize a small group (3-5 people) to simulate a mini-crisis (e.g., a pretend injury during a game or a “lost hiker” scenario). Assign roles (caller, comforter, task delegator) and practice coordinating as a team. Time yourselves—can you “resolve” the crisis in under 5 minutes? Write a short summary of how it went and what you learned about teamwork.
