Worksheet: Real-World Media Literacy in Action (Chapter 10)

Objective: Apply media literacy skills to real-world scenarios by analyzing teen success stories, planning a campaign to combat misinformation, and pitching your ideas to inspire change. This worksheet will help you think critically, work collaboratively, and prepare to use these skills in school and beyond.

Part 1: Reflection – Learning from Teen Media Literacy Wins (10 minutes) Read about teens like Sarah, Jamal, and Priya from Chapter 10 who used media literacy to debunk myths and start awareness campaigns. Answer the following questions in full sentences to understand what made their efforts successful:

- Pick one teen example (Sarah, Jamal, or Priya). What issue did they tackle, and why do you think it mattered to their peers?
- What's one strategy they used (e.g., using credible sources, choosing the right platform) that you could apply to a project of your own? Explain how you'd use it.

Part 2: Group Activity – Plan a School Campaign to Combat Misinformation (30-40 minutes) Objective: Work with 3-5 classmates to design a campaign that fights misinformation in your school (e.g., rumors about events, health myths, or stereotypes). Use skills like source-checking, teamwork, and ethical messaging to create a plan.

Steps to Complete:

- Choose a Topic (5 minutes): Brainstorm one piece of misinformation common at your school. Write a clear message for your campaign (e.g., "Check Before You Share School News!"). Our Topic and Message:
- Research Facts (10 minutes): Use credible sources (library resources, .edu/.gov sites) to find 2-3 facts that debunk the misinformation. List your sources. Key Facts and Sources:
- Decide on Format (5 minutes): Pick how to share your message (e.g., poster series, assembly talk, social media posts). Describe your idea briefly. Format and Description:
- Focus on Ethical Messaging (5 minutes): Ensure your campaign educates without blaming. Write one sentence showing your positive tone. Ethical Message Example:
- Assign Roles (5 minutes): Decide who does what (e.g., researcher, designer, speaker). List each group member's task. Team Roles:

Part 3: Activity – Campaign Pitch (15-20 minutes) Campaign Pitch – Present your group's misinformation campaign idea to the class. Your task is to pitch your campaign plan to your classmates and teacher as if you're asking for support to launch it at school. Follow these steps:

- Prepare Your Pitch (10 minutes): As a group, create a short 2-3 minute presentation. Include:
 - The misinformation topic and why it's a problem at school.
 - Your campaign message and format (posters, talk, etc.).

- One or two key facts from your research.
- How your campaign will help students (e.g., stop rumors, build trust).
- A call-to-action (e.g., "Join us to fact-check!"). Use the space below to jot down notes or a script for your pitch. Decide who will speak for each part. Pitch Notes/Script:
- Present to the Class (3-5 minutes per group): Deliver your pitch confidently. Use visuals (like a poster sketch) if you have them. Make eye contact and speak clearly to convince your audience this campaign matters.
- Reflect After Pitching (5 minutes): After presenting (or watching others), write one sentence about what went well in your pitch and one thing you'd improve for next time.
- Reflection:

Bonus Challenge (Optional – Homework or Extra Credit): Think of one small way to start part of your campaign for real. Maybe hang a single poster, post one social media message, or talk to a teacher about your idea. Write down your plan here and share any results in the next class.
