Confidence Quest Worksheet: Unleash Your Inner Superhero!

This isn't just any boring handout—it's your personal mission to discover, build, and celebrate your confidence like a superhero levelling up in an epic game. Through fun activities, self-reflection, and creative challenges, you'll explore what makes you awesome, tackle self-doubt, and set goals that stick. Grab a pen, some coloured pencils (if you're feeling artsy), and let's embark on this adventure to unleash your inner strength!

Mission 1: Discover Your Superpowers (Recognizing Strengths)

Every superhero has unique powers, and so do you! Let's uncover the skills, talents, or traits that make you stand out.

- Step 1: List Your Powers Write down 3 things you're good at or that you enjoy doing. They can be big (like "I'm great at basketball") or small (like "I make people laugh with my memes"). Not sure? Think about what friends or family compliment you on.

- Step 2: Design Your Superhero Emblem Pick one of your strengths from above and turn it into a superhero emblem. Sketch it in the box below (or describe it if drawing's not your thing). For example, if you're a great listener, draw a heart with headphones. Add a cool name for your power, like "Empathy Avenger"! [Space for sketch or description]
- Reflection: How does recognizing these strengths make you feel about yourself? Jot down one sentence.

Mission 2: Battle the Self-Doubt Villain (Overcoming Self-Doubt)

Self-doubt is like a pesky villain trying to dim your shine. Let's fight back with powerful tools!

- Step 1: Identify the Villain's Lies Think of one negative thought you've had about yourself recently (e.g., "I'm terrible at public speaking"). Write it down as if the Self-Doubt Villain is taunting you. Villain's Taunt:

- Step 2: Strike Back with Affirmations Flip that negative thought into a positive affirmation—a heroic comeback! For example, "I'm terrible at public speaking" becomes "I'm improving my speaking skills every time I try." Write yours below. Heroic Comeback:

- Step 3: Use the "So What?" Shield Imagine the worst-case scenario for something you're scared to try because of self-doubt (like failing a test or being judged). Write it down, then ask "So what?" to shrink its power. Example: "What if I fail the test? So what? I can study harder and try again." Fear:

_____ So What?

- Creative Challenge: Villain Smackdown Sketch Draw or describe a quick scene where you (as a superhero) battle the Self-Doubt Villain. Show yourself using your affirmation or “So What?” shield to win! [Space for sketch or description]

Mission 3: Claim Your Victory Badges (Setting & Celebrating Goals)

Small wins are like badges in a game—they prove you’re moving forward. Let’s set a goal and plan a celebration!

- Step 1: Set a Mini-Goal Pick one small, achievable goal for this week that will boost your confidence. Make it specific (e.g., “Speak up once in class” or “Practice guitar for 15 minutes on Monday”). Write it below. My Mini-Goal: _____
- Step 2: Plan Your Victory Party Decide how you’ll celebrate when you complete this goal. It can be simple (e.g., “Watch a funny video” or “Eat my favorite snack”). Write it down to keep yourself hyped! My Celebration: _____
- Step 3: Track Your Progress Break your goal into tiny steps if needed and check them off as you go. Use the mini-tracker below. Example: For “Speak up in class,” steps could be “Prepare one idea” and “Raise my hand.”
 - Step 1: _____ []
 - Step 2: _____ []
 - Step 3: _____ []
- Reflection: Once you’ve hit your goal (or even made progress), write one sentence about how celebrating makes you feel.

Bonus Side Quest: Spread the Confidence Power!

Confidence grows when you share it. Pick one of these quick challenges to inspire others and double your own vibe. Circle your choice and do it!

- Tell a friend or family member about one strength you’re proud of and ask them to share one of theirs.
- Post a quick pic or note online about a small win or affirmation with a hashtag like #TeenConfidence.
- Write an encouraging note to a classmate (e.g., “You’re awesome at art!”) and slip it in their locker or text it. Write a quick note about who you shared with and how it felt:

Final Reflection: Your Confidence Level-Up

After completing this worksheet, think about how far you’ve come on your Confidence Quest. Answer these two questions to lock in your growth:

- What’s one new thing you learned about yourself or confidence from this worksheet?
- What’s one confidence-building action you’ll keep doing after today (like using affirmations or setting mini-goals)?
