Please complete all activities in this worksheet. Write your answers in the spaces provided or on separate sheets if needed.

Worksheet for Chapter 7: Emotional Intelligence and Conflict Resolution: Managing Relationships

Instructions: Complete each section of this worksheet thoughtfully. Use the space provided to write your answers. Refer to Chapter 7 in "Soft Skills for Success After High School" if you need guidance. Be prepared to discuss your responses with a classmate or teacher.

Part 1: Deepening Self-Awareness – Understand and Manage Your Emotions

Objective: Build self-awareness by identifying emotions, understanding their impact, and managing triggers to stay in control during adult interactions. Task: Reflect on your emotions and develop strategies to handle them effectively in personal and future professional settings.

- Emotion Identification: Think of a recent situation where you felt a strong emotion (e.g., anger, excitement, anxiety). What was the emotion, and what triggered it? How did you react, and was your reaction helpful or harmful?
- Impact Reflection: Recall a time your emotions affected someone else (e.g., snapping when stressed, cheering someone up with your happiness). How did your mood influence their reaction or behaviour? What could you do differently next time to manage your impact?
- Trigger Management: Identify one situation or person that often triggers a strong emotion for you (e.g., criticism, tight deadlines). Write a two-step plan to stay calm when this trigger happens (e.g., deep breathing, taking a break).
 - Trigger: _____
 - Step 1: _____
 - Step 2: _____

Mini-Action Plan: Choose one self-awareness skill (identifying emotions, managing impact, or handling triggers) to focus on this week. Write a specific goal (e.g., "I'll name my emotions before reacting to stress"). How will you track your progress?

Part 2: Empathy and Interpersonal Skills – Connect with Others

Objective: Develop empathy and interpersonal skills by practicing active listening, reading emotional cues, and showing compassion to build stronger relationships. Task: Explore ways to understand and support others through thoughtful interactions, preparing for diverse settings like college or work.

- Active Listening Practice: Think of a recent conversation where someone shared a problem or feeling. Did you listen fully (no distractions, nodding) or interrupt with advice? Write how you could improve next time using active listening (e.g., paraphrase their words, avoid distractions).
- Reading Emotional Cues: Recall a time you noticed someone's body language or tone (e.g., slumped shoulders, quiet voice) showing an emotion they didn't say aloud. What did you think they felt, and how did you respond (or wish you had)? How can noticing cues help in future relationships?

- Showing Compassion: Think of a friend, family member, or classmate who seemed upset recently. Write one small action you could take (or did take) to show you care (e.g., a kind note, offering to help). How do you think this impacts your relationship?

Reflection Question: 4. What's one empathy skill (listening, reading cues, compassion) you find easiest or hardest, and why? How can practicing it help you in a new setting like college or a job?

Part 3: Resolving Conflicts Constructively – Turn Disagreements into Solutions

Objective: Learn and apply techniques for handling conflicts calmly and effectively in personal and professional situations. Task: Practice staying calm, communicating clearly, and finding win-win solutions through realistic scenarios and planning.

- Stay Calm in Conflict: Think of a recent disagreement (or imagine one, like arguing over group project roles). How did you feel, and did you stay calm or react emotionally? Write one calming strategy (e.g., count to 5, step away) you'll use next time to de-escalate tension.
- Communicate Clearly: Using the same disagreement, write an "I" statement to express your feelings without blaming (e.g., "I feel frustrated when tasks aren't divided because I worry about fairness. Can we set roles?"). How does this differ from blaming language?
- Seek Win-Win Solutions: For the same conflict, brainstorm two solutions that could benefit both sides (e.g., split tasks evenly with a schedule). Which solution seems fairest, and how would you propose it to the other person?
 - Solution 1: _____
 - Solution 2: _____
 - Proposal: _____

Practice Activity: Pair up with a classmate or friend. Role-play a small conflict (e.g., disagreeing on plans for a weekend). Use an "I" statement and suggest a win-win idea. Ask for feedback on your tone and approach. Note one thing you did well and one to improve.

- What I Did Well: _____
- What to Work On: _____

Reflection Question: 4. How did practicing conflict resolution (calmness, "I" statements, win-win solutions) make you feel? What's one technique you'll use in a real disagreement soon?

Part 4: Putting It All Together – Real-World Scenario

Objective: Apply emotional intelligence and conflict resolution skills to a realistic post-high school scenario. Task: Read the scenario below and answer the questions that follow.

Scenario: You're in your first semester of college, living in a dorm, and working part-time at a local café. Your roommate often plays loud music late at night while you're trying to study for an important exam, which frustrates you. At work, a coworker keeps forgetting to restock supplies, leaving extra tasks for you during busy shifts. Meanwhile, a close friend from high school seems distant and upset, but hasn't told you why. You want to maintain good relationships while addressing these challenges.

- Self-Awareness: Identify one emotion you might feel about the roommate issue (e.g., frustration). How will you manage it before addressing the problem (e.g., name the emotion, take deep breaths)?
- Empathy and Interpersonal Skills: For your distant friend, how will you show empathy to understand their feelings (e.g., active listening, asking gently)? Write one question or statement to start the conversation.
- Conflict Resolution: For the coworker issue, write an "I" statement to address the supply problem without blaming them. Suggest a win-win solution (e.g., a shared checklist). How will you stay calm if they react defensively?

- "I" Statement: _____
- Win-Win Solution: _____
- Staying Calm: _____

Part 5: Self-Reflection

Objective: Reflect on how the skills from Chapter 7 can prepare you for success in managing relationships after high school. Questions: 4. Which skill (self-awareness, empathy, or conflict resolution) do you think will be most important for your future, and why? Give an example of how you might use it in college or work.

- What's one small action you can take this week to practice one of these skills (e.g., tracking emotions, listening actively, using an "I" statement)? Who can help hold you accountable?
